EMS Event Standby Agreements

Large public gatherings such as festivals, sporting events, and concerts require extensive planning and additional resources. Sponsors of these events will often ask for assistance from local Emergency Medical Service providers to furnish EMS standby services. It is important to review these requests with the sponsoring agency to establish an understanding of the role the EMS will play during the event. Clearly communicating the role your EMS Organization will play may help minimize negative outcomes from assumed expectations and maximize the goodwill gained by providing standby service.

An Event Sponsor's expectations regarding the services provided by your standby EMS Organization may be substantially different than what you actually had in mind. GCA recommends that the service expectations be documented in an "Event Standby Agreement" to help avoid confusion and align expectations between the EMS organization and the sponsoring entity. It is a good practice to utilize an agreement on all requests in order to define the roles each party will take during the event including any responsibilities of the sponsoring agency.

Consider the following:

- Who will be the sponsor's EMS service contact before and during the event?
- Where are the locations of the event, intended staging areas and ingress and egress routes?
- What are the starting and ending times for the EMS service to be provided?
- How many EMS service units or crews will be required for the event?
- What level of service is requested (Advanced Life Support, Basic Life Support, First Responder, etc.)?
- Is the EMS service for first aid only or is transport capability also needed/requested?
- Is the EMS organization dedicated to the event and unavailable to respond away for 9-1-1 dispatched emergencies?
- What fee, if any, is being charged for the service?

A sample agreement is included for reference purposes only. It is strongly recommended that EMS organizations consult with their medical director and have their legal counsel review any written agreement.
